“ Christopher & I celebrated "not" May 22nd day which represented the day that was NOT Chris' birthday and NOT Laura's birthday. It was a special day just for us until May 22, 2007. Then came the MOST special gift we ever could have hoped for on May 22, 2007....our baby ALICE. Right now I can't imagine the emptiness and pain will ever be go away until I join her one day. Time dictates it will. I have no patience with time. Strangely enough it is moving along. I just don't seem to be a part of it. Our family support structure is pulled in tight and collectively we make one strong unit that will survive to see the sun shine once again. Andreue & I would like to thank everyone who has hugged us, held our hands and wipe away tears that I didn't even realize where falling from my face. Without your love and support I don't know where we would be. I could share stories/memories of all our beautiful times but the list would be too long. The secret morning breakfasts shared bewteen Andreue & Alice that GrandMeow would not have approved of, teaching her to swim at the pool, trips to the park, dancing and singing in the kitchen or anywhere the mood struck us!, working with GrandMeow on the computer, reading books in bed, or just plain figuring out how things worked together. Thank you for all the prayers and loving thoughts through this very difficult time. GrandMeow & DrueDoo We will carry you Alice in our hearts and souls forever...##imported-begin##GrandMeow##imported-end##

“ I wish she was still around so that I could see her one more time. I won't ever forget her smile...I won't ever forget how she used to laugh and play with her father. And she always had fun doing anything. She was a beautiful girl, and its gonna be hard to for a while, but I know that she's in a better place right now. I can still close my eyes and see her face, hear her laughter, see her running around chasing my duaghter and the dogs. I still dream of her every night. I'm gonna miss her a lot. She was family to me. I remember one day when she came over to the house, she was just a bundle of energy. I picked her up and held her close, and she giggled and played and laughed. She would walk around with a toy in her arms and point at everything! And she would have these little conversations with us. Those memories I'll never forget. The only memories I ever had of her were good ones. I remember going to visit her. We would all run around and have fun, and she would just giggle at us and clap. And she would sit down to eat, and every time she picked a piece of food up in her hands, and put it to her mouth, it was like as if she was trying something new each and every time. She would have this look on her face of joy and happiness. She would always jump from arm to arm, always switching with each person, giving each one a chance to hold her. I had loads of fun with her, no matter where we were. I still have pictures of her to look at every day. I remember when she was born. So many family members were there, and everyone just stayed and waited no matter how long it took till she was ready to come out to the world. And then we got to see her for the first time. The look on her fathers face was that of pure happiness. I remember the first comment that came out when she was born: "Woah, she's got big feet!" Everyone laughed and was so happy. They would all pick out each feature and try to relate it from one parent to the other! It was hard not to cry then, and its even harder not to cry now. But no matter how much I do cry, I just always try to remember those days. Those days will forever be with me in my memories.##imported-begin##Gregory Bajorek##imported-end##
