“ I had the privilege of calling Andy a friend. He was a wonderful gentleman who was full of stories and I enjoyed our time together. He was a great neighbor and friend and I had the privilege of sharing our Catholic faith with him.

“ He and Nancy always welcomed my future husband, Neil, and me into their home with warm hugs, great food (& a few drinks 😊) along with lots of laughter. They treated everyone as family. The world is less without their kindness. Two candles of hope have burned out. This is a heavier community of family and friends without them in it.

“ Andy was a true gentleman of a bygone era. Always offered intelligent conversation over a classic cocktail. He was a shining example to his grandchildren of what it meant to be a man of character. Men like Andy are few and far between. He will be missed, but I will always find a bit of him in his grandchildren, especially my son in law Will, who carries that class-act gene. I tip my hat to you Andy. Fare thee well.
