“ Miss beautiful, amazing, filled with joy Angela aka. Momma Brown. I will miss you so dearly, I am so grateful to meet your generous and intelligent son you have raised and to meet his mother is a honor. I deeply appreciate all the conversations and memories we shared. From the first day we met I instantly felt the love and joy you had given me and to be welcomed into your home and family with open arms means the world to me. Thank you so much for allowing me somewhere to finally call home. I’m not sure if you ever realized how important to me it was to have a mother to comfort me again but you have truly helped me feel at peace. I promise to comfort and support your son like we talked about when this time would happen. I will forever be here for Jim, Hope, Harper and Granny. There’s no words to explain how we feel without you here but we all know you are resting with ease. I love you so so much and we will see you later. ❤️🕊️

“ We had the privilege of hosting some of the class of 84 last weekend at the Brookwood Inn. Angela and her daughter Hope were two of the guests. I was absolutely blown away by Angela's mega watt smile, her positive attitude, and her excitement about being able to attend the reunion. If I hadn't known of her illness prior to her arrival, I would have never guessed that she was fighting for her life, and had been for some time. I was so impressed by her courage and beautiful spirit in the few short hours that I knew her. So much so that I can honestly say that I know I won't forget her. To have gone through what she had over such a long period of time, and yet still be the sweet & kind soul that all of you have loved for years was a beautiful thing to witness. Watching her sitting on her patio receiving her friends the day everyone checked in was a very moving experience for me. The love that the class of 84 has for one another is beyond measure. I won't forget it, nor will I ever forget sweet Angela's courage, dignity, and grace during what turned out to be just a few days before her passing. Hopefully it will be some comfort to everyone who loved her that when she left this world it was with a full heart thanks to all the love you surrounded her with. Sharon and Pooley, you really made it extra special. It was a privilege to have experienced what y'all loved so much about your sweet Angela. Sending lots of prayers to you all, and Especially to you Hope. You were so brave and strong that weekend, and I have so much love and respect for you too sweetheart. I know your Momma is with the Angels now ox
