“ Do people really not realize that this isn't the Los Angeles weatherman, Christopher Nance? He'd be pushing 70 now while this man would only be 54. Plus this man lived in South Carolina his whole life and had a business there. That's a long way to commute to LA for his 20 yr weatherman career.

I just saw the weatherman, Christopher Nance's daughter, Noella's Instagram post announcing her father's death. He passed away about six months ago

Ms. Honeycutt, please remove your comments from our family tribute to our beloved family member. Mr. Nance was let dishonorably relieved from his weatherperson position in 2002 after 17 years as a weekend weatherperson. Due to those circumstances it is natural to omit any and all details regarding that portion of his existence. He was quite capable of living a bicoastal life and maintaining an established business. You have managed to troll this thread numerous times with insensitive comments and are respectfully asking you to remove every comment you contributed to this thread . Thank you.

“ I was an employee of KNBC-TV in the late 80s, through the 90s. I always enjoyed saying hi and chatting with Christopher. I'd pass by his weather station and desk on the second floor. He was always smiling and kind and genuine with me. He's part of my memories from a wonderful time in my life. God Bless. 🙏

“ *To the Family,
Christopher Nance has not been forgotten. Keep him alive through the stories he shared with many of us as we spent time with him in Highland, California through the Highland YMCA run, guest speaker at California State University, San Bernardino, CA and Banner Elementary. Chris made so many of us laugh while he gave weather reports or speaking at events.
We knew he battled with a hidden disability and gave us all hope how we can have a quality of life with this type of illness.
To God Be the Glory!

“ I miss Christopher Nance's happy smile. He was here in L.A. in the 90's hosting the Diaper Derby in the mid 90's and my son came in first place. We won a year's worth of Diapers. I have always hoped I would see him again doing weather. He made me so happy during difficult times. I loved his happy disposition. I was searching around and I am saddened to hear he is gone. My sincerest sympathies to your family. Christopher will live on in my heart forever, always a ray of sunshine.

“ I too just heard about Christophers pasting, 5/26/15. I was one of the first and last volenteer for his Golf Tournaments for the Children. I met his dad at the first one in Filmore, CA. Loved Christopher so much. While traveling, he had a lay over of a few hours in Las Vegas. At that time, my daughter was at UNLV. We met him at the gate, and spent special time with him. Very special person, so sorry for your loss. He will NEVER be forgotten, that smile, and flower in his jacket when he did the weather. GOD bless him and his family.

“ Today is April 2, 2015.....I have just learned, moments ago, of Christopher's passing. I did know he was ill. I always enjoyed, so much, watching him do the weather reports.....always a smile and always "up"! I am so sorry to hear about this.....so sorry for your loss.

I live on the golf course at Tustin Ranch, in Tustin, California - and one day quite a number of years ago there was a tournament and I knew Christopher was going to be playing in it - so I sat on my patio and watched as he went right by me.....smiling and happy as usual. I won't ever forget that.....

RIP Christopher.....God Bless.

Sincerely,
Wendy O.
