“ Growing up I always remember my Aunt Diana as being abit of a legend in our house. To me she was Mum's mysterious sister who emigrated abroad. I was her bridesmaid at her wedding and so remember the blue velvet dress and white sash. I wore it for months afterwards as "dressing up" and remember being devastated when I grew out of it..... Sadly as she lived abroad we never really got to see much of her but any visits always bought about a touch of glamour and excitement. I particularly remember watching " The Sound of Music" with her when I was a child. I last saw her ago a few years ago when she visited us in England, sitting in the garden drinking tea. Diana reminded me very much of her mum , my nan and knowing my nan and her sisters so well over the years, she was very much from their "cut". You couldn't mistake her. She was always kind to us and I always had fun when I saw her, Everyday I am reminded of her because I use a set of dining mats she sent over.....Yes slightly weird, but a daily reminder..... Thank you for being part of our family Diana.

“ Diana was my auntie and even though I didn't have many opportunities to spend time with her, I have great memories from the times that I did. When I was 9 I went to the US for the first time and we did a road trip to Toronto to see Diana, Ted, Christine & Andrew. In 1977, the US & Canada was like a trip to the moon compared to the UK, and I still remember every detail of digging into a mass family feast of KFC and visiting Niagara Falls. The last time I saw Diana & Ted they visited my home in the UK and it happened to be the day of our local gala parade and we sat outside our house watching dancing panda bears (yes, really).

I remember my auntie as having a hugely happy laugh, and I think others did too. Not so many years ago when I was staying with my parents who still live in the same road that my mum, Diana and Rachael grew up in, a taxi came to pick me up to take me to Heathrow airport. The driver kept looking at me in his rear view mirror, until he said "I used to know someone who lived in this road who looks like you". Turns out he knew Diana as a teenager and had a bit of a crush :-)

I wish that I had a chance to spend to more time - but I am truly grateful for the memories that I do have of a wonderful woman who I loved seeing.

“ Mrs. Di and her family treated me and all of the other children she took care of like their own. Coming to her house after school was coming home, and her guidance and care made me the person I am today. There are far too many happy memories from over the years for me to pick just one to share, and that is a blessing in itself.

While I was deeply saddened to hear of her passing, I knew she was surrounded by Mr. Ted, her children and grandchildren. My thoughts are with you all now, as they often have been over the years in happier times. Her legacy lives on in the kindness she shared with others, as everyone who knew her can attest.
