“ I am a volunteer with Regency Hospice. When I first met Frances, she was so 'alive' and happy. She did not appear to be in pain, but happy to be alive. She and Regis joked with each other about her illness and I was suddenly in awe of the love they shared with each other. As the weeks progressed, I could see her health failing and her pain increasing. I tried to make her as comfortable as possible, but I felt helpless that I could not take away her pain. Even though I only knew her a short time, I feel blessed that she came into my life. She was strong and courageous and always tried to make me feel welcome, even though she probably couldn't remember me towards the end. What a lovely lady!##imported-begin##Leslie Weiss##imported-end##

“ For 50 years two angels walked this earth. They shared their love and their strength with everyone who knew them. They welcomed you into their hearts and their homes and showed you that no matter what you were loved. God called his special angels home to celebrate the rest of their anniversaries in Heaven. On this day all will stop and remember the angels that were joined together bringing into this world a love that none can ever compare. Happy Anniversary Mom & Dad! You are forever in our hearts, our souls and our love.###imported-begin###Cheryl Luketic###imported-end###

“ There are many people that come into our lives for just a little while but remain in our hearts forever. I will remember this wonderful lady for all the rest of my days. I can only imagine Gods smile as he welcomed her to her new home. In closing, I would like to share something that I had read during my training with Regency Hospice- All our years of education, every dollar we've earned and saved, each trophy we've mounted, each headline we've grabbed- in the end, what we want is what we wanted all along: someone to touch our hand and tell us we are loved. And what we have to offer is nothing more, or less than ourselves.##imported-begin##Kathleen Palmer##imported-end##
