Of all the many happy memories, I have countless summertime recollections of Grandmom standing at her cutting board counter, dressed in shorts with clip-on stockings and a v-neck top, looking glamorous with a silk scarf tied around her neck. There was always big band music playing in the background while Grandmom made us sandwiches for lunch. And her sandwiches always had a thick slice of tomato on them. That was happiness that you could eat! How Grandmom loved tomatoes! Her beefsteak tomatoes were the best I've ever had. Those days with Grandmom and Grandpop were golden days of childhood.
