*He was the rock that gave me stability.
He was the hand that guided me.
He was the pillar on which I stood for so long.
He was my shelter. My hero. My dad.*

*He raised me hard, but with love.
He showed me what it meant to be a good father.
He instilled in me a respect for others and myself.
He carried me when I was weak.
He championed me on my life's quests.
He corrected me when I was wrong.
He commanded respect.
He was a man of honor courage and commitment.
He led an amazing life and was loved or feared by many. Their choice.
He led a hard life, youngest of most his siblings, in a time when things were very different and difficult.
He had spent time as a police officer in Baltimore city in the late 60s/early 70s, a guard at Maryland house of corrections, a butchers apprentice at an a&p and ultimately Settled on a career in the electricians union where he spent many years active in behind the scenes politics and fraternities(he preached the benefits of the union to all, I mean all the time to myself, gavan, Emanuel3 and kevin. He loved motorcycles, fishing, guns and hunting and traveling.*

He was blessed to be loved by 2 wonderful women I have the privilege of calling mom.

He loved the lord and spent many hours witnessing to me and sharing God's love with me. He molded me into the man I am, stubbornness and all. I know that he touched all of our lives in profound ways and almost always with love in his heart. He was fair and just and a bullhead. I will try to live up to dad's family's legacies, *and carry with me all that he has taught. I will never fill his shoes.

But I will carry them with great pride.
I love you dad, you will be with me in all things and I will honor you in all things. Farwell dad, the love you have given me lives on.*
