“ My Papa was a hardworking man. I remember working at the tobacco barn when I was little and running up to him at the end of the day wanting to get paid. He would ask me how many tobacco leaves did I pick up off the ground and my number was always higher than what he remembered. He would reach into his wallet and give me a couple of dollars. I was so proud of those dollars! My visits with him were limited for the past few years but the times I did visit with him were priceless. I loved hearing tell the stories of his Army days. I could listen to him for hours tell those stories no matter how many times I had heard them.
