Judy was just a little when Randolph and I married. She was so tiny my daddy call his little FAT-GAL.. As all of you go through this painful time remember that Judy is walking the streets of gold today. She might even be running, because now she can breathe. Judy was tired here and her body was worn out., today she has a new body. We love all of you, RANDOLPH & REBBY

My Grandma was a wonderful person who had a lot of friends. She had been through a lot but always wore a smile on her face. She taught me how to smile and be brave. I told my grandma everything and i know that one day i will see her again and she is waiting for me and her family. My grandma was in pain a lot you could see it in her eyes but she never gave up. She always made other people feel better even if she was sick she always made people happy and put a smile on their face. This is a little late to write but i couldn't write it before because it didn't feel so real but know it does and i'm happy for her. Someone once told me that wanting her here is selfish and that you have to stop thinking about yourself that you have to think about your loved one who is not suffering no more. My grandma always thought about other people than herself and that's what she would want me to do. That is what she taught me to do. Maybe nobody will see this or read this but i felt like i had to write it because grandma would want me to and she wouldn't care if its late or whatever. She would say its never to late. That you know when its the right time to do it because you have to listen to your heart. My grandma taught me a lot of things and now its my turn to teach other people. I love my grandma with everything i have and i will keep loving her and i will tell my children about her and i will help my brother and sisters remember her because i got to spend 15 years with her and they didn't. So that was all i had to say and that no matter what you do grandma Judy is there watching over use and sending use love.
