“ Although I only knew Marge a few short months, I grew to love her deeply as a child of God. When I knew she was nearing the end of her journey here on earth, I wrote the following tribute to her:

*God brought us together for reasons we may never know
Was it for me, or was it for you? Probably for both of us, I'd like to think so*

*I remember how much you loved your ginger ale
I will store that in my heart forever
I remember how you loved moving the silverware around the table
I will store that in my heart forever
I remember how you thanked me whenever I helped you
I will store that in my heart forever
I remember how you loved the animal book I brought you
I will store that in my heart forever
I remember when the care givers thought I was your daughter
I will store that in my heart forever
I remember how your face lit up when I came in the room
I will store that in my heart forever*

*I didn't even know how old you were or when your birthday was,
But I loved you anyway
I didn't know where you were born or where you lived your life,
But I loved you anyway
I didn't know what you did for work or what you did for fun
But I loved you anyway
I didn't know your favorite color or your favorite song
But I loved you anyway*

*Jesus made a room for you in heaven
I know that to be true
There will be no more tears, no more pain in heaven
I know that to be true
We will meet again someday
I know that to be true*

*My life has been so blessed and inspired too
I am forever changed, because I loved you*
