“ We have many fond memories of Bud - he was a wonderful husband, father, cousin, brother...a terrific human being. He was so funny and charming and open hearted. He had the patience of Job. When Ellen was a kid, she thought she was being nice and put a bumper sticker on his car. He never yelled about it to her. He also answered what probably seemed like unstoppable questions about his dogs whenever Ellen asked. We love you a lot! “ Dear Fretwell Family, Marvin was a great friend of mine and such a wonderful mentor. He taught me so much about the business I work in. While this was important, it was the life lessons he taught me that I apply to how I live and treat people. I will forever be grateful to my friend Marvin for this. Liz and I feel your great sadness and may God Bless Marvin. Liz and Peter###imported-begin##Liz and Peter Reaske###imported-end##

“ TOMORROW’S LOVE On the clouds of tomorrow, or the sod of today dig my place slowly ere I pass away. \t\t For the loves of tomorrow, and the loves of today had their beginnings, they all had their say. \t\t From the louds of all sorrow, the pain of today dig my place slowly ere I pass away. For the loves of tomorrow and the loves of today all have their endings; for now it’s today. So on hill or in vale, or in all blinding gale make my place slowly, and without fail: play all the musics, read all the words. The beginning has ended not all of my words.\t \t\t Yesterday begins, and now may I send the loves of tomorrow, the loves of today all had their endings, for now it’s today. For now it’s the day, and I’m passed away. On the clouds of tomorrow I am passed away. But Love is forever, forever I say, And all of my love is NOT PASSED AWAY.
