Laura, I am sorry for yours and Mr. Johnson's loss. Mrs. Johnson was always been good to everybody and always had our backs at work. She taught me many good lessons that I will never forget. She was a great person.

“ One of the blessings of being a doctor for friends in our home town is we are connected at so many levels: as friends, as doctor and patient, as generational connections through children and grandchildren, as colleagues, etc. Even in her last week Mary Frances was alert, in good spirits, at peace with her illness, comforted by her extended, adjacent family. We told stories to remind ourselves of our many layers; and her persistent good humor was both striking and contagious. And this family, we could only hope our support and care will be so all encompassing, so competent, so loving.
