“ Momma, As I set here at the computer and think of what a great Mother you were, I can't help but think of the many times you would pray over me before school and all those times of you driving us to church, Of all the lessons in life the greatest one you taught me was to love god with all my heart for you said that if you love god with all your heart the things of life seem but all so small. Mom as you are in heaven praising our God and Jesus tell him to get my place ready because if I can be the kind of christian that you taught me to be I will be there when my journey is over here. Mom thank you for your love and being my mother and best of all thank you for teaching me and sharing your Jesus with me. I will always love you and look forward to seeing you again. Your oldest son. “ I never said a word as we laid you to rest, but the people who heard me speak of you kept hearing one word over and over. "Intercessor." You were the intercessor. You bridged the gap for so many of us. You held us all together, Grandma. It was so hard to watch you battle this demon for so many months, but I know even then you were whispering prayers for us rather than for yourself. I used to love to hear that song, "Someone Must Be Praying For Me." I always knew that should I ever forget to get on my own knees, that somewhere you were praying for me. It's for that reason, and so many others, that we grieve. We know you're in a better place, but your homecoming is such a loss for those left behind. I fear that instead of unifying as a family, we will lose ourselves in our own grievances. I can only pray that your memory will hold us together somehow. I can still remember so many rides to and from church that I was honored to share with you. I know in recent years we have not had those same opportunities, but I know that out of all your grandchildren, I got to spend the most time with you--and that was my blessing. I remember when it was prophecied that you and I would always have a special bond. You would tuck me up under your wing and help me bravely face the world, and now I know you're watching me walk the rest of the journey without you. I pray you knew how well you endowed me for this journey called life. I was honored and priveleged to be your granddaughter. I love you, and you will always be missed. I know that up there, even while you're enjoying your new home, you're still bridging the gap in some way. I love you. I will miss you always. Love Forever and Always, Your Granddaughter.##imported-begin##Amanda and Starla Abernathy##imported-end##
