“ He was the best Grandfather we could have asked for. My brother said it well in a few words. “There are so many great memories how do we choose just one” or even a few. I remember many things he taught me from finances to taking care of the things we do have. He had a deep love for my grandmother, this country and was proud of his service during WWII. I know he loved all his children all the way to his great grandchildren. We could always feel loved even if it was stern, and he loved us unconditionally. I knew I could always call him for advice as only someone who was 91 could give. I was sure he had seen it or lived it. He was alive and lived through the depression and a difficult childhood unlike anything subsequent generations have seen. I knew I could count on good guidance from him. None of us would be who we are today without him and my grandmother. He is surely missed already and I am sure we all will miss his sometimes subtle and sometimes not so subtle guidance as we realize the loss in our lives his death has left. Someday he will be there again waiting to greet us on the other side of the river, where tears and sorrow will be replaced with joy and happiness. Thank you Grand Pop.
