“ Sheila will be missed greatly by so many that loved her. We said our final goodbyes to her yesterday at a private viewing. I know that Sheila is enjoying her coffee and resting peacefully now. She was beyond proud of Terry and John, as am I. Her family meant to world to her and I am so thankful that I got to be her daughter in law. Sheila has not had an easy life but she made the best of every situation and created a beautiful family! She was so strong, sassy, feisty and content! I will miss her but I am so glad that we had the time we did together and crated the bond we have. Rest easy and watch over us Grandma Sheila! 💔😭☕

“ Sheila, mom, was someone I considered a wall for my brother and I. Much sacrifice was given, well beyond the point I could imagine, for all the years growing up to ensure our up bringing to be as normal as possible. Mom was not afraid of this world and she made sure everyone knew that, but this was part of the wall I remembered her. Her dedication and constant pushing, I believe is what molded Terry and I to the people we are now. Mom showed us that there is always good out of a bad situation and to get that good, you push forward.

Mom's re-spark in life is when Melissa, her first grandchild came to this world (and more so as it was the first girl in the family). Preston was next when Terry and Candace were married and from that point, her grandchildren kept increasing with her last two, Oliva and Brayden. Last few years she wanted to do nothing but be close to her family as that was all that meant the world to her.

The most important thing I know that meant the world to mom was for my brother and I to get along and keep each other close.

Through out the years she has mentioned that after dad and she pass away, we two are all that's left of this family. I personally took this with a grain of salt as I would of never imagined their passing would be so soon. So, this is how I intend to honor mom and to start living my life for my family, mine and Terry's. That what she did and that's what she wanted.
