“ Never forget the smiling face when I was just a little kid and when you walk into the house and the brightness that surrounded you. Like a big sister with the kindness from within you always shared. If I could go back and say one thing to you many years ago, it would be sorry 💔 and she would understand why . Thank you for always saying just the right things back then at the right time and that too only you would understand. God bless and have mercy on you as you enter into his home. Love peace for eternity . ❤️🙏

“ Susan was the eldest of the Brocar Girls, like a second mother to me, the baby. I will cherish all my fond memories and miss her loving ways. Never did she forget to let me, after each conversation, how much she loved me. Susan's faith never waivered through her years of trials and tribulations, and placed all her trust in God. Finally free from pain and anguish and comforted in the arms of the Lord. Sleep well, my sister, until we meet again in the heavens. I love you forever.
