“ This still is not completely real to me. I can't imagine what it will be like without you, but I know I will miss you terribly. You were like my own child, you were born into my house & I remember your mom being so sick that she could not take her head off the pillow, so I took you to work with me & all my customers helped me take care of that tiny baby. I remember going to your house after you were in school & helping with your reading sometimes. You & I were so proud when you got your diploma. You & Dustin always walked into my house & immediately pushed everything off my coffee table when you were little. You went to the mountains with me & when you saw those around Chimney Rock you said " Darn, I thought Rock Hill was the mountains". Not long after that we took you to the Rockies to see the real mountains. You hit every campground asking where the girls were. You scared me half to death roaming in the Badlands with that rod in your leg. I finally got to go horseback riding in the back-country of Yellowstone because you went with me, while your grandad waited in the car. You always loved going somewhere. Wish we could have done more. You always had a hug for me when you came in or left & You always said I love you at the end of every phone call, even when we were arguing. Children are not suppose to go before their parents & definitely not before their grandparents. I would even settle for an argument with you now, just to have you back. You are at peace now. We all love & miss you already.

“ A great grandson. he gave the whole family all of his love, and in return is loved by all of us. A large part of this family has gone home much to soon for us to understand why, but a Higher Calling has been answered. We all love and miss Wesley very much. Granddad- Bill D.

“ Sharing a memory of you, I can think of many....the day you message me on Facebook wondering how we knew eachother, I told you we had attended the same elementary school and you were always the kid in hallway and people asking if we were related since our last names were pronounced close to the same to others. Days after that we sat on your mom's porch and talked for hours. Another memory, we went to a Night of Thousand Candles at Brookgreen, it was soo cold we got gloves out of the gift shop fit for children! You were my date to my sister's wedding in which you caught the garter belt, your face turned so red. You playing the rafting game on the Wii with my son. I remember the day you decided to go back to school, you were happy about that, i was proud of you. And of course you can not forget the time I got my new car and you had to show me what it was made of! Although you scared the shit out of me. Your laugh is one in a million. And of course you can't forget your favorite game online, you know the pool game I wish I could remember the name. These are just a few of the memories I have of you. (I know it says to write about you, I rather write to you)
