“ I served with Col Baxley in Texas, at Fort Hood, and in Vietnam in 1967 and 68. I was his RTO (Forward CP radio operator) during his whole tour in Vietnam. I am sorry to be leaving this message so many years after his passing, as I just learned of it. He was a wonderful leader, and a truly inspiring gentleman, even during those violent times. I will cherish the remembrances I have of him and his caring for every trooper in his unit, his compassion, and integrity. He commanded the 1st of the 6th Infantry, 198th Light Infantry Brigade from it's inception and training at Fort Hood through the famous TET offensive in 1968. This was one of the largest unit battles ever fought within the Americal Division, and is little known outside those who were there. I was beside him the whole time. Col Baxley was our leader, in whom we had absolute faith and trust. Because of him, and other good officers, we were a strong and proud unit, and were made a primary Americal Division reaction force early in 1968. We never lost a battle, never failed in a mission, but it cost 100 very good men the first year, with at least twice that many wounded. I was proud to serve under him every day. His strategy and tactics always got the mission accomplished, and with the least risk to the men who had to carry it out. His family must know that the men who served under him during that time carry his mush respected memory with us for life. Bless him and his family.

“ Col. Baxley became a dear and trusted friend of ours when our son, Andrew D'Antoni, entered West Point and afterwards during his two deployments to Iraq. In those difficult and arduous years, Col. Baxley was always there to counsel, support and encourage Andrew and us through dark days and tough times. He shared wonderfully funny stories of his days at the Academy as well as insightful and inspirational thoughts from his own experiences at war...his wisdom and candor provided immense comfort and support to a mom of a soldier and to our family. When Col. Baxley would depart our home, he always stood tall, erect, and gave a crisp military salute, but this was always followed by a warm smile, a twinkle in his eye, and a big bear hug. We honor you for your immaculate service to our country and the abounding love you gave our family. Alice D'Antoni Phillips##imported-begin##Alice and Ben Phillips##imported-end##

“ I first met Col. Baxley while I was still a young cadet at the United States Military Academy. In the brief times I was able to spend with him, whether on leave from the Academy or on return from Iraq, I was always stood in awe of the man. Many colleges and universities have their own stories and heroesâ??for us at West Point, it is those men who stand in the long grey lineâ??those graduates of oldâ?? whose lives become our story and in whose courage we find our heroes. Col. William Baxley now takes his place in this long grey line, his story, merging with that of so many others in blue and grey, khaki, and olive drab, to become our story, and his courage, providing us with yet another hero. He was an officer, a gentlemen, and his life embodied the Academyâ??s mottoâ??Duty, Honor, Country. From one graduate to another, nothing more need be said, exceptâ??well done Colonel Baxleyâ??be thou at peace.##imported-begin##Andrew D'Antoni##imported-end##

“ Col. Baxley will be greatly missed at both Coastal Carolina University and As a member of the Coastal Educational Foundation. I knew Col. Baxley from both Coastal and FUMC of MB. He was a great individual that I had a chance to call friend. He would make it a point if he saw you in a room to either say hi to you or shake your hand. I am deeply honored to have been able to both know him and to have worked with him. My deepest sympathy goes out to his family in this time of great sorrow. Both Col. and his family will be forever in our thoughts and our prayers.##imported-begin##Joshua Chesson##imported-end##
